

MEMORANDUM

TO: City of Port St. Lucie
FROM: GrayRobinson
DATE: April 30, 2023
SUBJECT: 2023 Legislative Session – Week 8 Summary (April 24-28)

The Governor is abroad, but make no mistake, his presence was felt everywhere. For starters, an amendment was placed on the now-annual elections bill that would clarify Florida’s resign-to-run law to ensure that someone (possibly a Governor) could run for the office of President or Vice President without having to resign from his or her current office. As well, the ongoing saga between the Governor and Walt Disney World increased its pace to ludicrous speed<sup>1</sup> with a lawsuit filed by the theme park company.

Not to be forgotten, during the penultimate week of legislative session, the House and Senate hunkered down to complete its constitutional duties of budget negotiations, which now will include their respective tax packages. As well, the immigration legislation sought by the Governor moved closer to the finish line.

These and other highlights are featured below in our summary of the week that was in Tallahassee.

Port St. Lucie Activities

Budget conference is near complete, with a few silos still needing resolution. Late yesterday, the “water list” debuted. Although, it had not been accepted by the House yet. In stark contrast from the last decade, this budget conference has been rather peaceful, without much, if any, drama. Will the Governor be so drama-free with his vetoes? We will likely know sooner, rather than later, as most are expecting he will make an announcement in May that will turn his focus away from Florida business.

In case you were wondering, the speeds from that Mel Brooks classic are: Light Speed, Ridiculous Speed, Ludicrous Speed, and Plaid Speed. We have not yet hit Plaid Speed in how fast this saga is progressing, but give it time.

Summary of Week Seven (April 24-28)

Senate Books Vacation Rental Regulation Bill

A measure attempting to set out the line between local and state regulation of short-term vacation rental properties is headed to the House after approval on a 28-10 vote in the Senate on Thursday. The bill (SB 714) would allow cities and counties to require vacation rentals – like those rented on platforms like Airbnb or VRBO – to register and pay a fee to do business and allow some local regulations, as well as allowing suspension of the local registration for properties with multiple code violations. Opponents, however, including some local governments, said the bill doesn't allow them enough leeway to control rental properties that essentially serve as party houses, especially those tucked into otherwise quiet residential areas. The bill would also require online platforms to collect and remit sales taxes to the state. It goes next to the House.

House Tax Package Approved...Waiting on Senate

The House gave unanimous approval to a $1.4 billion tax package on Thursday that provides tax exemptions for both consumers and businesses. The 73-page proposal (HB 7063) includes some of Gov. Ron DeSantis' priorities, such as a permanent sales tax exemption on baby and toddler necessities, including diapers, clothes, changing tables, strollers and other items. It also provides a one-year sales tax cut on ENERGY STAR appliances. The measure includes a business rent tax reduction of 1%, from 5.5% to 4.5% for 13 months, which is expected to save businesses around $394.4 million. Other noteworthy items in the tax package include a permanent sales tax break on gas stoves and several tax free holidays. This year's proposal provides for a 28-day "back-to-school" sales tax holiday over two separate time periods, one this coming July and August and another in January of next year, on clothing, school supplies and personal computers. Another tax holiday included in the plan is called "Freedom Summer," which would run from Memorial Day to Sept. 4, and is estimated to save residents $224 million on items such as concert tickets, sporting equipment and camping supplies. Additionally, the measure provides a "Tool-Time" sales tax holiday from Sept. 2 through Sept. 8, for tools and other home improvement items, and includes the annual Disaster Preparedness tax holiday, which would run from May 27 to June 9 and offer tax exemptions on disaster-related supplies like batteries, radios, pet food and pet medications. The governor's recommendations, however, for a $170.2 million one-year sales tax exemption on pet food and for a permanent sales tax exemption for over-the-counter pet medications didn't make it into the bill. The tax relief proposal is expected to be the largest in state history, with $300 million more in exemptions than last year's tax package. A similar tax cut plan in the Senate (SB 7062), worth nearly $1 billion, is awaiting consideration on the floor. Neither version includes DeSantis' suggested one-year tax exemption for basic household goods under $25, such as toilet paper and hand soap. The House measure, however, includes a temporary 1% reduction in sales tax for residents and visitors to Hillsborough County to compensate them for the unconstitutional one cent sales tax they paid from 2019 to 2021. That provision is not in the Senate's plan.

DeSantis vs. Disney Continues With a Lawsuit...

Walt Disney Parks and Resorts sued Gov. Ron DeSantis on Wednesday, saying the governor is on a "targeted campaign of government retaliation" against the company that is unconstitutional. The entertainment giant also sued the governor's hand-picked oversight board that replaced the former Reedy Creek Improvement District board that had provided services to Disney before the governor and Legislature replaced it. The lawsuit was filed in federal court in Tallahassee minutes after the new board named by DeSantis voted to nullify agreements Disney reached with the former board just before it was abolished. The governor sought to take over the local special taxing district after the former Disney CEO criticized legislation pushed by DeSantis that banned classroom instruction on gender identity and sexual orientation in early elementary-school grades. "This government action was patently retaliatory, patently antibusiness, and patently unconstitutional," the complaint reads. "But the Governor and his allies have made clear they do not care and will not stop."

...And A Change in Statute

The Senate on Wednesday passed legislation (SB 1604) aimed at the move Disney and its old special district board reached just before the board was replaced, seeking to retroactively nullify the agreement. The measure, which passed 27-13 mostly along party lines with Republicans in favor, says that if any special district board is changed from elected to appointed – as was the case with the special Disney board under legislation passed last year – any agreement reached during the three months prior to the change-over can be nullified. "An independent special district is precluded from complying with the terms of any development agreement, or any other agreement for which the development agreement serves in whole or part as consideration, which is executed within 3 months preceding the effective date of a law modifying the manner of selecting members of the governing body of the independent special district," says the measure, which was sponsored by GOP Sen. Blaise Ingoglia. Debate and the vote on the bill came just hours after Disney filed a lawsuit against the DeSantis Administration over the governor's administrative and legislative actions against the company, which followed Disney's opposition to an education bill he pushed for last year (see above). Because of the lawsuit, Ingoglia declined on the Senate floor to answer some direct questions about the origin of the legislation, or some of the specifics about the intent of the bill. Democrats complained that the governor was using Republican legislators for his own "personal vendetta" against the company. "This happens in Venezuela, in Cuba ... not in the United States," said Democratic Sen. Jason Pizzo. The vote in the Senate also followed a vote by the new board appointed by the governor, which was renamed the Central Florida Tourism Oversight District Board of Supervisors, voted to void Disney's final development agreement with the previous Reedy Creek board.

Election Bill Clears Senate, Limits Resign to Run

The Senate on Wednesday passed a multifaceted election law bill aimed at tweaking some of the details related to voter registration and the process of elections, issues overshadowed somewhat by a provision in the bill that will make clear that Gov. Ron DeSantis can continue to serve as governor while running for president rather than having to resign to run. Democrats said Republicans were trying to allow DeSantis to shirk his responsibilities as governor while running for president – and that politicians shouldn't be able to both serve in a local office while running for a national one that takes them away from their constituents. They noted that DeSantis didn't go to Fort Lauderdale recently after major flooding because he was in Ohio giving speeches. "He shouldn't be able to be politically married but continue to date," said Democratic Sen. Jason Pizzo. The resign to run provision was only one part of a much broader bill (SB 7050) making a number of changes to election law, including the imposition of large fines for voter registration groups that fail to submit registration applications in time, new requirements for additional information to be included on voter registration cards, and clarifications of situations in which provisional ballots must be cast. The bill was sent to the House and is now on the special order calendar for Friday in that chamber.

Immigration Crackdown Passes the Senate

The Florida Senate on Friday passed a bill targeting illegal immigration, including by beefing up requirements for businesses to check the immigration status of workers and requiring hospitals to collect data about whether patients are in the country legally. The bill is a priority of Gov. Ron DeSantis, who frequently criticizes the federal government about undocumented immigrants coming into the country. “The problem is that ... as states, we keep on creating incentives for people to come across illegally,” said bill sponsor Blaise Ingoglia, R-Spring Hill. “Until the states push back, which is what we are doing now, the federal government will never act. We are trying to force them into action.”

The bill, in part, would require all businesses with 25 or more employees to use the federal E-Verify system to check the immigration status of workers. Since 2021, such businesses have been required to use E-Verify or what are known as I-9 forms. Among other things, the bill would require hospitals to ask patients about whether they are U.S. citizens or are in the country legally. Hospitals would be required to submit reports about the responses to the state. A similar House bill (HB 1617) is positioned to go to the full House.
